BITION.

THE OPENING CEREMONY.
 (By TELEGRAPH.)
 (FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)
 ALBURY, Tuesday.
 The industrial exhibition organized in aid of the funds of the Albury Mechanics' Institute was opened to-day under the most favourable auspices. It ap-and all attempts at a material reduction have been unsuccessful. It was, therefore, decided by the management of the institution that the only way of making the school successful was in 1879, when Albany, making the lead of all other country towns in the State, was the first to introduce the system of free education, which resulted in a net profit of about $100,000. The management of the Mechanics' Institute, which was the first to introduce the system, considered that as the position of the institution was critical, an attempt should be made to do something more than to maintain the school as a mere educational institution, the character of an exhibition than of a school. They secured for their purpose the use of a large number of the most valuable and interesting exhibits from the East-side and the Free Bridge Station. Under the energetic direction of the management, the school was covered in with a temporary roof of corrugated iron. Although many of the exhibits were not made, the management of the school, by the use of the exhibits, secured for the school the applications for space for the school, and the school was opened on the 1st of September, 1879, before the opening day of the year.

could more than cover the preliminary expenses of the undertaking. It now only remains to be seen whether the residents of the district take sufficient interest in the exhibition and its object to make it as successful as its general character deserves. So far as the opening day is concerned nothing more satisfactory in the way of weather could have been desired. As the annual show of the Albion and Border Pastoral, Agricultural, and Horticultural Society commences to-morrow the town, as is usual,

A glance round the building early this morning tended to convey the impression that at 3 o'clock, the hour fixed for the opening ceremony, the place would be found still in a state of unpreparedness, but by dint of strenuous exertions everything was got ready in good time, and when the exhibition was declared open all the stalls and trophies were fit for examination by the most critical. The hall con-opening ceremony to take place there, and it was decided to perform it in Dean-street. For that purpose a roadway in front of the building had been fenced off as a bar to traffic, and decorated tastefully with streamers of flags, whilst on the footpath at the entrance of the institute carpet-covered platforms were hastily constructed, and all the available chairs and forms were placed on the street for the accommodation of the spectators. The attendance must have easily equaled 3000 persons, for outside the rows of seats

Attending a view of the proceedings were crowded. Among the gentlemen seated on the platform were Messrs. R. T. Ball, J. Gurnely, and H. Jones, Mr. L. A. Alderman D. N. Watson (Mayor), Mr. J. Wilkinson (president of the Mechanics' Institute committee), and Mr. G. A. Thompson (vice-president), and the members of the committee. The proceedings were commenced by the school children from Wodegar and Albury singing the National Anthem.

It was expected that on an occasion so important to the town of Albany that at least one of the New South Wales Ministers would have been present. Four members of the Government had been invited; but none of them had come. As to the Victorian Ministers, Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Taverer had promised to attend, but neither had done so. No reason had been given for Mr. Taverer's absence; but with regard to Mr. Isaacs it appeared that the only reason was that he was in the country. It was not known whether Mr. Isaacs would be in the country on such a day as would enable him to attend the Conference.

ment of Victoria was concerned, they had rendered the utmost assistance to the promoters of the exhibition. (Cheers.) The Government of this colony had made no attempt to render any assistance, and he could not help contrasting their treatment with the Government of Victoria. They had asked the Railway Commissioners to carry rails and sleepers free of charge, but they refused to do so, except at a reduced rate, while the Victorian railway authorities had offered the railways at the disposal of intending exhibitors, reminding them to send tons of plans to Allure absolutely free of charge. (Appendix.) When it was necessary to send his manager round on business in connection with the exhibition he applied for a passport; but the Commissioners refused, and he had to pay his fare wherever he went. In Victoria they gave him a free passage, and in Melbourne they gave him £200 worth of flags and decorations free of any charge and also a splendid exhibit of warlike munitions from their Defence Department, representing fully £10,000 of military and naval equipment, and had also sent Major Carmichael and four assistants to explain the uses of this warlike gear to the people (Hear, hear.) The building has been an excellent storehouse, and the committee sent six cinders to lay down a system of flooring, which would have cost £600. There were tons of cinders at the railway station of no value to anyone, but the officials asked is per cubic yard. The promoters, however, succeeded in getting tan for nothing. (Applause.) Then our Postmaster-General had offered to send

The Mayor (Alderman Wason), in a short speech, declaring the exhibition open, said the show made would be creditable to any inland town in the colony, and would provide an excellent object lesson for the rising generation.

subject and presence of others who were better acquainted. He remarked that the majority of exhibits were sent in from Victoria as a good omen for federation (cheers)—for if they were only a little more united they would soon be shaking hands over the same line dividing the different colonies one from the other. A few more of such exhibitions, he believed, would help on the cause of federation immensely. (Applause.)

Mr. R. T. Ball, M.L.A., having been called upon presence of Ministers, but so far as lay in his power he had endeavoured to induce a member of the Government to come, and to get the Railway Commissioners to be more lenient in the matter of rates, but he honestly believed the reason that no New South Wales Ministers were present was the same which had kept the members of the Victorian Government away. Parliament was in session in each colony, and they felt they could not leave their public duties. The Hon. Sydney Smith had promised to

had met with a bereavement in the death of his father, and could not be present. It was true that three-quarters of the exhibits were from Victoria, but it was to be remembered that Victoria always had a jealous eye on the Albury district; and rightly so, for that colony was the natural outlet for the products of the district; but he hoped to see the day when the existing barriers between the colonies should be broken down, and no trade jealousies should longer exist in the presence of intercolonial

Mr. J. Gormly, M.L.A., congratulated the district of Albany upon the many signs he had witnessed of its increasing progress year by year, for it was 51 years since he first crossed the Murray at that place, and then the only dwellings in the neighbourhood were a couple of bark huts down by the riverside. (Laughter.)

This concluded the formal proceedings.

An examination of the exhibition showed very clearly that the estimate that three-quarters of the

It was rather depressing to walk from one trophy to another searching in vain for well-known labels and familiar signboards. The most interesting trophy in the place is, unquestionably, that furnished by the Victorian Defence Department. It must have been brought up at great cost, for it includes several heavy guns and a stock of small arms ranging from the old "Brown Bess" to the latest specimens of the Lee-Metford, a variety of mechanical appliances for re-loading cartridges, and shells boats, and submarine mines, and also models of military bridges and an observation tower. Amongst the large collection of swords and spears were pointed out some which are of Japanese manufacture, and were said to be in all respects equal to the weapons of the same class turned out in European factories. There are also a couple of small-bore Maxim-Heavy rifles, which are samples of a lot of 500 supplied by Japanese makers to the order of the Victorian authorities for the use of the cadet corps.

excellent material and to carry well up to about 2000 yards. Next to this exhibit, however, comes one from the well-known Sydney house of W. H. Paling and Co. It is creditable to the firm and to the industry, and it attracted very much attention, it including a number of items known to the public as well as above the average. It was a very numerous assortment of instruments so arranged as to make the whole a handsome article of furniture. The Sydney Morning Herald and the Sydney Mail exhibit was also attentively examined. There are shown a number representative of the various types of landscape, and choice bits of landscape in various parts of the colony. There are also specimens of the matrices on which the stereotype plates for the pages of the Illustrated are cast, as well as samples of these plates. The Singer Manufacturing Company has a fine exhibit of sewing machines, and specimens of art-embroidery. Messrs. Mate and Co., of Albany, display a tastefully arranged assortment of perfumery from Messrs. Elliott and Co., wholesale druggists,

Widdowson and Co. show some excellent samples of brass that are now becoming very popular. Widdowson brothers have a fine trophy of silverware, excellent manufacture.

Amongst other New South Wales exhibitors, the most attractive and considerable attention were those of Messrs.
